

YANKS CAPTURE STE. MERE EGLISE IN DRIVE ON CHERBOURG; BATTLES FIERCE

The War Today...

By DeWitt MacKenzie
AP War Analyst

WE ARE AT A DIFFICULT and dangerous stage of the invasion of Cherbourg peninsula.

The superb Allied forces already landed are battling ahead with their job in business-like fashion, but the operation has been handicapped by bad weather. We are not, as I see it, as far ahead in the initial drive as we would have been with smooth seas and fair skies.

This means, of course, that the enemy has gained precious time in getting set for his all-out counter-attack which is in the making. It means the Allies have their work cut out for them to get ready for this crucial onslaught, which Rommel is likely to speed up in view of circumstances.

We have completed the first phase of the landing, as supreme Allied headquarters tells us. This is the securing of a foothold and the defeating of the local German reserves. We are now engaged in the second phase, which is a swelling battle with Hitlerian reserves that are being rushed from neighboring stations. The third phase will be Rommel's major attack.

Right from the start the invasion forces have been handicapped by the weather. Troops and supplies have been landed on the beaches with great difficulty because of high seas. In short we should have had a lot more men and material ashore had the weather man been a good sport.

Now let me think that this is rather a bad picture I will remark that I didn't get out of bed on the wrong side. I'm feeling swell and am confident. But I think it's smart to look this invasion giant right in the eye.

What the Allies need most of all is a port through which could be poured the endless forces and the mountains of supplies which are vital for the breaching of Hitler's Atlantic wall. By the way, the main defenses of that Atlantic wall are not, as a lot of people seem to think, on the sea shore. They are well inland and the Allied high command has said they are formidable.

THE GREAT PORT of Cherbourg—one of the world's finest—would be a Godsend to the Allies right now, and the signs are that they are aiming at its early capture. If we can get Cherbourg and isolate the peninsula we shall indeed be sitting pretty.

Here enters the element of time in a big way. The Allies will have to move fast in order to get set for the Nazi attack which will come as soon as Rommel can figure out just what he's up against. It's vastly to our advantage that he's deceived by the fact that the Allies are capable of flinging armies ashore elsewhere. He dare not concentrate all his strength, or anything like it, on any one port under such conditions.

The Germans say—and I see no reason to challenge their word—

Courageous, Skilful American Soldiers Praised By Reporter

By DON WHITEHEAD

WITH AMERICAN FORCES IN FRANCE, June 8.—(Delayed)—Fighting as American troops did in Tunisia, Sicily and Italy, doughboys have smashed through the outer crust of Hitler's fortress in a gallant display of courage and skill.

The battle of the beachhead has developed now into a race to get enough doughboys, guns and supplies ashore to beat back the enemy attack and it looks as if we are winning.

Never before has an army attempted to land such vast numbers of men and materials in such a short time, but the job is being done after a shaky start.

When we landed behind the assault troops the enemy still was pouring a heavy machine-gun, mortar and artillery fire into the boats as they drove ashore and had our troops pinned behind a gravel bank just above the water's edge.

Troops, supplies and vehicles began to pile up on the beach at an alarming rate. The enemy controlled the exits with accurate fire and the time schedule was being disrupted.

But under the urging of a soft-spoken brigadier general the organized enemy positions were silenced and the great surge inland began.

In a matter of a few hours the engineers had roads built from the beach and the heavy stuff was pouring across.

The army's communication system for correspondents accompanying American troops broke down completely and for more than 28 hours we were unable to get news out.

We were even more bitterly disappointed when we turned on the radio and heard a BBC report from British correspondents accompanying British troops.

Snipers Infiltrate Lines

One unforeseen difficulty here was that three fresh regiments of German infantry moved onto the beach area just before the landing for anti-invasion maneuvers. They were sitting in their positions when the armada arrived offshore.

Along the beaches were underwater barriers, barbed wire, emplacements, concrete houses with 88 mm. guns covering the beach approaches. The walls of the houses were of reinforced concrete four to six feet thick.

The prisoners coming back to the rear look rather small and scrawny. They look with wonder at the bigger and stronger American boys and their fine equipment.

During the night German snipers infiltrated our lines and made life uncomfortable. The troops were wet from wading through the surf and the bedding of most troops was lost in vehicles swamped on the beach.

TWO MEN CONFESS ALLIANCE ROBBERY

AKRON, June 9.—State highway patrolmen and Akron police reported today two Akron men had confessed participating in a grocery store robbery at Alliance, O., and the theft of three automobiles—one of them a highway patrol car—while attempting to elude pursuers.

Detectives Arthur Adams and John Griggin and Patrol Sergeant M. A. Mock said two men sought as William Villers, 25, and Ray Furlong, 26, confessed the robbery and auto thefts after being apprehended here. The officers said both previously served prison terms.

State highway patrolmen joined in the chase which followed the $109 Alliance robbery Tuesday. Patrol Corp. C. S. Shaw of Warren was injured when he halted a car containing the fugitives.

Shaw said he rammed their car with his own, but was thrown to the pavement. He said the fugitives then abandoned their car and took his. The abandoned car as well as one later used and abandoned by the fugitives, was sold by police to have been stolen.

Youth Center Is Result Of Year's Study

This is the first of two articles explaining the purpose and planned organization of the Salem Youth Center, which is being established in the Arbaugh building by the Salem Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Salem's Youth Center—now in construction stages in the second and third floor rooms in the east end of the Arbaugh building—is an out-growth of nearly a year's planning and study by several local civic groups.

The purpose of the center, as it being established by the Salem Junior Chamber of Commerce, is to provide Salem's "teen-agers with a wholesome atmosphere in which to conduct and direct their own educational recreations."

The proposal of such a place was originated almost a year ago by the Junior Chamber in a meeting at the Memorial building, at which time it was decided by the group after some discussion that the manpower problem within the organization prohibited any further action.

Since that consideration by the Jaycees several other civic groups have undertaken a study of the plan, but have later abandoned it because they felt their organizations were not the ones to undertake it.

The Jaycees, with material gathered by the Kiwanis club, the new

City Plans Cleanup Beginning Tuesday

Service Director Frank Wilson announced today that a general cleanup of the city—postponed this spring because of the heavy amount of street repair work to be done—will be held, starting Tuesday morning.

Citizens are urged to get their trash and rubbish boxed and placed at the front curbline by Tuesday. No back collections will be made.

The route of the workers will be from Lincoln ave. east on E. State st., collecting on all streets of the postoffice. Then workers will be all streets west of the postoffice as they come to them.

Wilson advised all residents to have their rubbish placed at the curb lawns Tuesday morning since service department workers may be able to cover the city in less time than previously because some people have had their tin cans and other junk hauled away privately.

U. S. BOMBERS RAID MUNICH

Nazi War Machine Given Disrupting Blows From South and West

(By Associated Press)

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 9.—U. S. heavy bombers striking from the south 500 to 750 strong battered prime targets in the Munich area of southern Germany today, in a new pin-point attack on the Nazi war machine coordinated with disruptive blows on German positions in France from the west.

The bombers, flying into the Munich area for the first time from Italy, and their escorting Lightning, Mustangs and Thunderbolts fought through clouds of German fighters to reach their targets.

Swiss dispatches reported explosives in the Munich and Augsburg areas.

(A BBC broadcast said the Allied whiplash from Britain had destroyed all railway bridges on the Seine river between Paris and the sea.)

For the first time since D-day official reports, however, made no mention of Allied air-borne operations last night.

Weather Is Bad

During operations of the past 24 hours 52 German planes were destroyed in the air and 20 others accounted for on the ground, as against an Allied loss of 35 fighters and five bombers.

Weather cut down the scope of the aerial operations supporting the invasion troops.

Germans made four fighter-bomber attacks against the invasion front.

Fights Develop Into Race For Supplies In Normandy Sectors

BULLETIN

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 9.—A powerful American thrust has plunged within 18 miles of the prize port of Cherbourg after capturing Ste. Mere Eglise.

By WES GALLAGHER, Associated Press Writer

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 9.—American troops hammering toward Cherbourg have captured Ste. Mere Eglise, advancing within 18 miles of the strategic port, the Germans conceded today.

Supreme headquarters made no mention of the town, but declared Allied forces were making progress in all sectors despite fierce Nazi armored counter-attacks over the green wheatfields and orchards of Normandy.

The German communique conceded the loss of Ste. Mere Eglise, astride one of the main German arteries leading to Cherbourg, saying the Americans were pushing "north and south" from the landing head there.

Then a later Berlin broadcast said U. S. troops had advanced a mile beyond the town toward Valognes, 12 miles southeast of the port that would form a great funnel for Allied reinforcements and supplies into the battle for France.

American Rear Admiral John Leslie Hall, Jr., on a tour of the beachhead, told correspondents operations were going well, but stressed the necessity of quickly building up our forces.

At least 1,600 Nazi prisoners have been taken. A field dispatch today said Americans had captured 600, including some Russians and Poles.

Other Berlin broadcasts reported street fighting in Caen, and an Allied push toward Carentan, 40 miles to the west, and 29 from Cherbourg.

Supreme headquarters gave no confirmation of these or other details, but declared the steadily-augmented Allies were holding firm under counterblows of increasing weight and "making progress" on all sectors.

Front dispatches said the battle was developing into a race for supplies.

Allies Engage Ten German Divisions

Ten German divisions now are engaged, Supreme headquarters said, while the Germans said up to 20 Allied divisions had been thrown in. Many Nazi prisoners have been taken.

The Allied command was silent on the battle for Caen—a town of 61,000 population. Caen was described as a pivot of German defenses.

The Germans said the Allies had penetrated five miles below and six miles west of fallen Bayeux, and said Allied beachheads had been strengthened. The Nazi high command claimed gains east of the Orne.

One front dispatch said Americans now hold a beachhead five miles deep on a broad scale, with smaller penetrations several miles farther inland. U. S. parachute troops captured one town, it said, and infantrymen drove the Nazis from another. Much of the fighting was waged on a tree-to-tree and ditch-to-ditch basis, it added.

Other front reports said "it is becoming the most involved battle with local retreats and advances having a very definite effect on the general plans both of our commanders and the enemy. Both are seizing every chance to drive in a wedge when there is the slightest faltering."

RAP night bombers hammered German supply rails behind the Ormandy peninsula.

A communique last night, the sixth issued by Supreme Commander Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower since the invasion began, said British and Canadian troops were making continued progress and that American bridgeheads on the west were "being gradually enlarged."

"The enemy is fighting fiercely," said the communique.

The tank battles, in progress since late Wednesday, apparently flared over most of the stretch between Caen and Bayeux—a flat region that front line dispatches have described as excellent for armored warfare. Rocket-firing Allied planes dipped low west of Caen yesterday and hit the Nazi armor.

EVENTS TO COME

Events thus far in the summer campaign in Europe are part of a larger pattern of events to come. Invasion of Normandy, while it marks an early climax in the grand strategy of attack, is clearly only a beginning. It will not constitute the whole of the "second front" that has been awaited so long.

It is clear now that the conception of a second front has been misleading, to the extent that it obscured the shape of the war as a whole. The Allied campaign in Italy, for example, no longer appears as a separate operation, but is being given its proper place as a second front spearhead which preceded the landings in Normandy by many months.

Germany is expecting, by its own admission, another spearhead to be driven from the Mediterranean into the southern coast of France, perhaps from Corsica. There exists the probability of still another spearhead of attack somewhere in the Balkan peninsula. Meanwhile, the Germans are on the alert for invasion at all likely points northward from Normandy up the invasion coast to Denmark and even on the coast of Norway.

Russia is poised in the east for a resumption of its offensive through Poland. There is a possibility of action in the Baltic, to make Allied sea power felt in that hitherto securely guarded German flank.

Development of shuttle bombing as a tactical operation bringing Anglo-American air power in touch with Russia's air power has given symbolic and actual unity to the intensified effort to defeat Germany during the summer of 1944.

All fronts now are part of the same grand strategy of assault. When it stands fully disclosed, as it probably will by the end of June, the second front in western Europe will take its proper place in an encircling force which will be close in on the heart of Adolf Hitler's beleaguered empire from every practical quarter.

Aviation already has marked the trails. Development of the air-ground attack, as employed in Normandy, makes it possible for ground forces to be established wherever planes can fly. There is no position which cannot be flanked, or assailed from the rear. There is no place in Hitler's empire that can be regarded by its harassed defenders as entirely safe.

The very circumstances of geography which a few years ago seemed to give security to Germany's European conquests have been transformed by the military technique of aerial assault and the tremendous improvement in amphibious attack into a liability.

Germany's defenses must be kept at maximum strength everywhere at once. Such forces as may be subtracted to deal with invasion in Normandy become unavailable for dealing with invasion somewhere else. Divisions engaged by the Allies in Italy are drawn from strength needed in the east facing Russia.

There are days of the deepest anxiety ahead for the Allies. The operations being undertaken by the United States, Great Britain and the powers associated with them in their part of the summer campaign are extremely hazardous and are certain to be costly.

But it would be shortsighted not to recognize that the anxiety on our side this year cannot approach the infinitely greater anxiety of the Germans. No amount of domestic propaganda can blind them now to the shape of the intensifying campaign to reduce them to defeat. They are assailed from the outside of their empire on every point of the compass and from the inside by the vengeful populations they have captured. Ultimate defeat is to them as logical a conclusion as to the Allied powers which now are prepared to administer it.

Those whose birthday it is may be on the eve of a year of novelty, innovation, the strange, unique and probably glamorous, with change, travel, new and surprising denouements. Romance and adventure loom large, and should bring much happiness and gratification, providing the emotions and impulses are properly restrained. Strange and dramatic experiences are probable, of magnitude and importance on the future career.

Modern Paul Bunyan
By JACK STINNETT

SAN FRANCISCO—Not since Pecos Bill rode into camp on a mountain lion, using a live rattlesnake for a quirt, or since Paul Bunyan arrived to shake down San Francisco, using big redwoods for toothpicks, has the west had a hero like Henry J. Kaiser.

To California and the rest of the Pacific coast, the big, burly industrial magnate is a miracle man. He strides up and down the coast from Seattle to San Diego; hops off to the nation's capital and gives the industrial east a piece of his mind, and returns to find the west hanging on his every word.

Kaiser's reputation is based on fabulous accomplishment. A whole network of production from raw materials in the western hinterlands to finished ships and super planes stems from his four floors of central offices in midtown Oakland just across the bay. Industrial California has mushroomed in a couple of years until only production centers like Detroit, Pittsburgh and Chester, Pa., can claim any comparison.

But if Henry J. Kaiser stopped there, the Pacific coast probably would be relegating him to limbo. He doesn't. The west has one great worry. It's simply what's going to happen when this is all over. California alone has added more than a million population since the last census and billions of dollars in wartime contracts. Kaiser is operating five huge shipyards in the San Francisco bay area, to mention only one section. Once sprawling little Richmond, for example, had about 20,000 population. Now it has about 100,000.

Communities and states like these that don't look ahead are living in a fool's paradise and most Pacific coasters know it. The thing that makes Henry J. Kaiser the fabled character that he is out here is that he has answers for everything.

Perhaps you've already heard of Kaiser's post-war plans for building supercargo and passenger planes, for high-speed trains to replace the rolling stock rapidly shaking to pieces under the pressure of wartime transportation.

Kaiser doesn't stop there. There's hardly a fortnight that he doesn't come out with some new scheme for keeping the west in the industrial picture and the west gobbles it up—simply because it is positive that what Henry Kaiser has done over and over again in wartime, he can do once more in peacetime.

What makes California credulous is that Kaiser makes it sound so easy and in the past has never failed to make good his words. If the industrial east wants to stay that way, it had better start figuring how to beat Kaiser to the draw. Ten or 15 million people out here think he's the fastest man on earth.

Is it any wonder that alert minds are drawn into economics and sociology and science and law when those in charge of the humanities persist in their refusal to bear upon the problems of life in the United States. I do not desire to drive Europe out of colleges. I merely insist upon the necessity of putting America in.—Dean Howard Mumford Jones of Harvard university.

Fear and "being afraid" are topics combat personnel often talk about and freely admit. About the only persons who deny fear of combat are those who repress anxiety, develop psychosomatic symptoms and have to be removed from combat status because of those symptoms.—Col. Walter S. Jensen, deputy air surgeon.

Law or justice has nothing to do with it—if you have the money you can get a divorce and thwart all the state laws in the union.—Rep. Norris Poulson of California.

Vitamin B Deficiency Discussed

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
VITAMIN B is the most puzzling of all the vitamins. In the first place it is the most complex chemically. Whereas, up to 1919 we thought it was a single and fairly simple structure, it now is known to be composed of many elements, some of which have been identified.

Dr. Clendingen will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

chemically—such as thiamine, riboflavin, nicotinic acid and each plays its own role in nutrition, and each, if it is absent, allows of a different sort of disease condition to appear—neuritis or pellagra, or sore mouth as the case may be.

We know that Vitamin B is absolutely necessary for life, and adults as well as children need some of it every day. Also the body cannot synthesize it, but must have it supplied in the food. In this it differs from some of the other vitamins. Vitamin D is necessary in young life, but adults get along with very little. Also the body can synthesize Vitamin D from the action of sunshine on the skin. If you get some Vitamin C every once in a while you do all right, not necessarily all the time.

Contained in Most Foods

Naturally with such a very necessary article nearly all foods contain it, and it would hardly be possible for a person to eat any kind of a mixed diet without obtaining a good daily supply. But sometimes something goes wrong so that the Vitamin B in the food is not utilized.

As my regular readers know I regard wholesale dosing with vitamin capsules and extracts as foolish and unnecessary. Not that I have any doubts about the absolute necessity of getting the vitamin, but I prefer Nature's way of providing them and that is in the food. Another of my beliefs is that I do not see that the vitamin deficiencies are so frequent that extra preventive care should be instituted. But in case of Vitamin B I am willing to admit that circumstances occasionally arise when some minor forms of deficiency occur even when the vitamin is present in the food.

One of these, for instance, is diabetic neuritis. We know that one definite entity ascribable to Vitamin B deficiency is neuritis. Typically it is the form known as beriberi found mostly in the Orient in countries where rice is the exclusive article of diet and where the only Vitamin B containing part of the rice, the shell, is removed by milling because that suits the taste of the populace better. But there are some forms of neuritis found in all countries, such as alcoholic neuritis, which may be due to Vitamin B deficiency because the alcoholic gets his calories from his alcohol and eats very little food rich in Vitamin B.

Diabetic Neuritis. In diabetic neuritis another factor operates. It is known that Vitamin B operates particularly with carbohydrate nutrition—making the sugars and starches available for use by the cells. And we know that diabetes is essentially a profound disturbance of carbohydrate utilization. So it is quite possible that in diabetes the body cannot use Vitamin B even when it is present. And diabetic neuritis therefore responds to the use of large amounts of concentrated Vitamin B in assimilable form.

Again Vitamin B is often recommended for fatigue and loss of appetite. Undoubtedly it does control appetite and is valuable in regulating the bowels and hence preventing constipation. The spectacle, however, of thousands of people dosing themselves with Vitamin B tablets to help that tired feeling is not one that appeals to a real scientist.

Under certain circumstances the use of Vitamin B for fatigue is more scientific. Particularly I refer to life in the tropics. Vitamin B is readily excreted in the perspiration, so the resident of the tropics may lose his Vitamin B so fast in the perspiration that he needs a more abundant supply than his neighbor of the temperate zones. Certainly the effect of a tropical climate on producing that tired feeling gives considerable support to this view.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

C. R.:—Do you think eating raw carrots or drinking carrot juice every day will help eyesight?

Answer: Carrot juice and carrots contain a large amount of Vitamin A which prevents night-blindness. Their use presumably makes one see better at night. Aviators are fed a daily, or rather nightly, allowance. But don't overdo it or you'll turn yellow.

M. M. H.: How much water should a person 70 years old drink? I have heard that five glasses is all one should have. Sometimes I drink eight, but do not want to injure my health.

Answer: Plenty of water never injured anybody's health. The best doctor to consult about it is Dr. Thirst. He orders more sometimes—say in the summer—than at other times. It is impossible to force too much water into the system. Plenty of it flushes the kidneys, promotes nutrition and is generally helpful. And it isn't rationed.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendingen has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendingen, 235 E. 45th st., New York. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining Weight," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

St. Louis Firemen Must Observe All the Rules

(By United Press)
ST. LOUIS—No lady rescued at a fire can ask the fireman to lunch—at least without permission of the fireman's commanding officer.

The 1944 edition of the fire department manual reads, "that a fireman is not permitted to 'contract for lunch when at a fire without permission of his officer.'"

The fireman is forbidden to listen in on other people's telephone conversations when he's at the station, not only on account of rules but also because of the "impropriety," the book says.

After a rough fire, the fireman can't climb into a station house bed with his shoes on. He can't be a pixie, either, and "maliciously" shoot a stream of water at anybody. He can't use a station house bathtub or shower for any other purpose than that for which it is designed—for instance, he can't wash out a bucket or a cuspidor in the tub.

And—he can't smoke on his way to a fire or coming back.

YOUTH CENTER

ly organized Parent-Teacher association and information gleaned by their own investigations, have revived the idea and put it into actual formation.

Visited Centers In Other Cities

Studies were made, trips taken to observe, and definite plans formulated by a committee of Chamber men who visited four operating centers in Kent, Akron, Canton and Ashland before the Salem Jay-teen was begun.

Serious consideration was given to suggestions made by Prof. W. H. Nisonger of Ohio State university and Carl Bogart of the Gladden House, a youngsters community recreational center in Columbus.

These two men were called in by the Parent-Teacher association and reported their findings on Salem's youth problem in a meeting at the High school early in April.

Both men agreed that Salem needs a place for boys and girls to get together and enjoy wholesome activities that will consume their natural energies in worthwhile interests. Otherwise, they said, much of this energy is often wasted on activities that greatly contribute to delinquency problems.

Later the P. T. A. conducted a poll among students in the High school to sound them out on such a project. They responded almost wholeheartedly in favor of the idea, voting 639 to 52 for it.

Rooms Are Made Ready

With this much information and encouragement in mind, the Jaycees proceeded with their plans, setting up a system to organize the students for work-crews before school was dismissed. Approximately 150 students have already answered the work call and have succeeded by several days of scrubbing walls, sandpapering rough plaster, sweeping floors, painting walls and washing windows, to get the five room site in shape for the skilled workmen needed to advance their respective work.

As soon as the skilled work is completed, further cleaning done and furnishings moved in, the center will be open. Jaycees and students are hoping, they say, to have all that accomplished by the early part of July.

Membership will be open to all teen-agers for a slight membership fee, small enough to be accessible to all. The recreational center will be open through the summer months at least three nights a week.

Supervision will be handled by Jaycees—men between 21 and 35 years of age—and their wives. At least one or two couples will be in the place as chaperons during the time the center is open.

Eventually, the Chamber plans to turn the governing powers of the center over to the students and will retire to an advisory capacity. A control group—made up of responsible, civic minded citizens will be named to iron out whatever problems may arise.

According to Herbert Brown, acting-president of the Chamber, the project offers an opportunity for Salem to benefit itself and its teen-agers.

"It will be educational in teaching our youngsters to tackle and complete a job," Brown said today. "Under proper supervision, teen-agers will be able to supply their own entertainment and at the same time learn to get along better together."

"Cooperation will be the keynote of this project and the adults of Salem here have an opportunity to provide a grand place for whole some, mixed-youth activities, which in the end will pay the community great dividends."

pilots who fly rocket projectile typhoons. They said the Germans are using horsedrawn vehicles to bring up supplies to save petrol. Occasionally they meet German air opposition but so far German pilots have avoided genuine dog-fights.

The pilots I saw have not seen many German tanks but have shot up some enemy reconnaissance cars.

Nothing Like This

BY CHRISTOPHER BUCKLEY
Representing the Combined British Press

WITH ALLIED FORCES IN NORMANDY, June 7. (Delayed)—Standing this afternoon beside a group of citizens in Bayeux as Allied tanks, guns, "tank busters," armored cars and Bren carriers rolled through town, I found this general comment most gratifyingly expressed in a single sentence: "The Germans have nothing like this."

"Atlantic Wall" Just A Myth

(Editor's Note: Roger Greene of The Associated Press was one of the first war correspondents to hit the beach in the invasion of France.)

By ROGER GREENE
WITH THE ALLIES IN FRANCE
June 6.—(Delayed)—As far as we could see after advancing five miles inland, Hitler vaunted "Atlantic wall" is a myth. The thickest old brick wall, two feet thick, along an apple orchard where I am sitting deep in the grass writing this story.

The crackle of rifle fire some 500 yards away is intense, and every few minutes we throw ourselves flat and try to squeeze our whole bodies under our battle helmets as German shells burst in the orchard nearby.

The Heines seem to have our range, and we will be moving on soon.

Aside from scattered pillboxes, barbed wire and slit trenches, the German static defenses so far have been practically nil, and in this sector at least we have seen nothing of the great concrete fortifications 12 feet thick which the Germans had boasted they had erected along this coast.

Their mobile artillery appears their most formidable defense.

There is no evidence of the "millions" of mines which the Germans said they planted all over the countryside.

The first Frenchman I met after landing had borrowed enough gasoline from the Germans for his motorcycle to leave his work on a German gun emplacement and join the Allies. An ex-soldier in the French army, he said the Allied naval and air assault preceding the landings shook the whole countryside like an earthquake.

"Alas," he said, "we had wine saved to greet the Allies, but now it is gone. Pout-bombs and wine do not mix. Verree sad."

Most Paratroopers Are Heroes

By WILLIAM STONEMAN
Chicago Daily News Correspondent

ON THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA, Wednesday, June 7.—(Delayed)—Not every man is hero in any army, but the paratroopers who hit the coast of Normandy soon after midnight on D-Day came close to reaching that ideal.

They left their planes while the air was full of German tracers and most of them hit ground far away from their comrades. After forming into small groups they fought throughout the night against far superior forces and drove them helterskelter away from the beach-head area where our infantry was due to land.

It was a cowboy and Indian fight at night in a strange country which was all the stranger because lots of the men didn't land where they had expected.

Some paratroopers killed or captured Germans. Others engaged the Germans without doing much damage, while others who landed alone spent the night trying to find their friends.

All testified that most Germans took to hedgerows as if by prearrangement when paratroopers landed and preferred to snipe from cover and run rather than fight. Paratroopers themselves quickly adapted themselves to the hedges, but didn't run.

Air-Borne Troops In Gliders On Way to France

Opening blow in the invasion was dealt by air-borne troops, transported to France in C-47 cargo planes towing gliders. Today, as the invasion beachhead is widened, reinforcements and supplies are being landed by waves of gliders. This picture is the first showing cargo planes towing the gliders filled with air-borne infantry over the channel. Note invasion boat lane in water far below. Ninth Air Force photo. ## Household Hints

Never use a sheet for a laundry bag. This puts extra strain on the sheet which will result in wear.

To save energy and heat, iron washable overalls when they are nearly dry.

For easier cleaning select an oven roaster with rounded corners.

Give brass door knockers a coat of wax and there will be less polishing needed as the wax forms a protective coat which keeps off tarnish for some time.

Always remove any unwashable buttons, buckles and shoulder pads from woolen sweaters before laundering them.

Roman men used to trace the veins in their arms with blue paint.

In New York City alone in one year, one thousand fires were started by household dry cleaning.

Drowns In Fish Pond

FARMERS SAY GIRLS BEAT BOY WORKERS

(By International News Service)
ITHACA, N. Y. — Farmers prefer girls to boys when it comes to hiring inexperienced farm help.

That was the consensus of farmers interviewed by the Department of Rural Sociology at Cornell. They had all used help from 15 youth camps operated last summer to relieve the farm labor shortage.

The farmers said the girls were more cheerful workers, were less inclined to play while at work, were more persevering, and did not tire as easily, especially in the late afternoons. The older girls were especially preferred, as they were more serious, less easily fatigued, and maintained an interest in their work.

Testimony of farmers indicated that the youths were successful as farm workers. Only one out of each four of the youth workers were boys, practically all under 19 years of age.

Family Represented by Three Branches of Service

Harold Shannon

Robert Shannon

Donald Shannon

With three boys—Harold, Robert and Donald—in three branches of the service, and all serving in different parts of the world, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Shannon, 893 N. Howard ave., have what can truly be called a "world-wide" interest in this war.

Robert, 22, is an engineer third class in the Merchant Marine and is now stationed on the coast of Africa. Donald, 20, is a Marine corporal and has been in the thick of battle for better than 16 months while serving in the South Pacific. Harold, 19, youngest boy in the family, has been overseas with the Navy as a radio-mechanic third class, five months and his father believes he is somewhere around New Caledonia.

With such a variety of areas and battles to keep up on, it is easily understood why Mr. and Mrs. Shannon are well posted on the war's progress. The task of keeping track of the boys has been a trying one, but Mr. Shannon says he feels their luck has been exceptional.

Though all the boys have been in action—and some of the thickest fighting there has been—only Robert has received wounds of any kind. The Merchant Marine suffered an injury to his left leg when a ship he was on exploded.

However, the injury wasn't serious and after eight weeks in a hospital in England he is back in service.

Robert enlisted in November, 1942, and has been at sea most of the time. His brother, Donald, enlisted in the Marines in March, 1941. Donald has seen more action than any of the other boys, being overseas for 16 months. He spent a 30-day leave with his parents in September and returned immediately to the Pacific.

To round out the Shannon family's contributions to the war effort, Mr. Shannon is a tool and die maker at the Mullins plant.

Jack Ballantine Is Host to Paul Manning In England

In a V-mail letter just received here, First Lieut. Jack F. Ballantine of the Air Corps, stationed somewhere in England, sends greetings from Paul Manning, one of the Salem Town Hall meeting speakers last winter.

Manning, representing the McNaught Syndicate and CBS, is covering the invasion in Europe. In his letter Ballantine says:

"As public relations officer at the station where I am located, I entertained him on a visit here during which he flew on one of our missions. (Since then Manning has broadcast a description of the invasion.)"

"He remembered Salem as being one of the finer places on his lecture tour. He is quite a likeable man and made an excellent impression on our boys. The appearance of such a well-mannered, neat and considerate correspondent on a base makes the work of a public relations officer much easier. This fellow Manning is a credit to the profession."

Jack says he receives the Salem News regularly. He was sports editor of this paper when he enlisted in the Army in October, 1940, and was the first employee to enter the service.

His present address is Lieut. Jack F. Ballantine O-576466, 585th Bomb. Sq., 394th Bomb. Gp., APO 140, care postmaster, New York, N. Y.

Develops Maps Showing Areas for Types of Pain

SAN FRANCISCO—Maps of pain, which show definite pain areas and paths over which certain types of pain tend to spread, have been worked out by Dr. Verne T. Inman, clinical instructor in orthopedic surgery.

Facts brought out in the study by Dr. Inman are expected to aid in diagnosis and alleviation of pain. The data explained why a sprained ankle or knee cap causes pain which goes up the leg and throws light on the sciaticas typical of low backache. The diagnostician can use the pain map to classify the area of pain where an injection of opiate many times can be used to stop pain immediately, Dr. Inman said.

Small Circuses Hit Paydirt At Crossroads This Season

By MURRAY POWERS

In a score of smaller cities today horses are prancing, elephants are plodding, clowns are cavorting, the band fills the tent with gay music and the daring young men and women on the flying trapeze offer their best in a bag of thrills.

It's all done without the glamor that surrounds the "big one," the Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey circus that manages each season to monopolize the circus news in the big newspapers, on the press services and in the magazines.

But were it not for the scores of smaller circuses—most of which you probably never heard of—many an American youngster would never know of the romance of the sawdust in the big top. The R. B. & B. and the Cole Bros., half as large, have been the only two railroad circuses on the road in the last few years and they have been playing two and three-day engagements, cutting down the number of cities visited.

Red Wheels Rolling
But the motorized, the truck or the mud show—call them what you will—chug along from April to November, across the country and back, up and down. This is their year. This is the year for small circuses.

Last year showmen went back to winter quarters with their deep pockets filled with greenbacks. It was a marvelous season. So what happened? Every showman who didn't own a circus but had ambitions, and could round up a bankroll and the necessary canvas, rope, trucks, seats and other scarce equipment got himself a show.

And now they're out. Either this is going to be one of the circus' greatest financial years or the countryside is going to be peopled by stranded circuses. The early season reports favor the former—for already the shows are playing to capacity.

The shows are good and bad in quality of performance, just as some movies are good and some are poor. All of them have that traditional circus atmosphere, the big top, the cockhouse, the "grease joint" (midway eating spot), the opening spectacle, the wild west show. They all have horses and dogs and ponies, most of them at least one elephant.

They load them into the trucks and trailers and move on to the next town, either immediately after their night performance or the next morning.

The performers live in their house cars. Some of the shows have "sleepers" for the band and other workers. Some have trailer compartments, three or four to a long truck-like trailer.

And virtually all are "brothers" shows. That's a circus tradition. Not more than two or three families of brothers own circuses. The Ringling family, of course; Russell Bros. was a family name. The little Mills Bros. circus actually has three brothers. But, almost every show that started out this spring tacked "bro" on after its chosen name.

One of last year's truck shows leaped into the railroad class this spring—Dailey Bros., down Texas way. Manager Ben Davenport bought 10 railroad cars to move his tented aggregation. Cole Bros., the other railroad show, is playing the Midwest after opening at Louisville, Ky., winter quarters.

Rolling the Wide Countryside
And now the motorized shows on the road include: Wallace Bros., headed into the east; Mills Bros., in Ohio; Arthur Bros. and Clyde Beatty-Russell Bros. on the west coast; Al G. Kelley & Miller Bros. in Oklahoma; Globe Bros., Ray Bros., Reo Bros., Bailey Bros., Hunt Bros., Cooper Bros., Sello Bros., Roy Bros. and Dorothy Herbert, Hugo Bros., Monroe Bros., plus the brother-less titles of Cronin's Circus, the Bud Anderson, the Jay Gould and the Seils-Sterling.

Where do they come from? Wallace wintered in York, S. C., Mills in Ashland, Ohio, Beatty-Russell in Los Angeles, Kelly & Miller in Jackson, Mich., Bud Anderson in Emporia, Kan.

Along with the prospects of fine business, the shows, too, face the prospect of labor shortages. Performers are helping "put it up and take it down," carrying properties, putting up seats, driving trucks. But if those long lines of ticket-buyers outside the red wagons are a daily occurrence, no one is going to worry about the work.

Human Kindness Proves Sour Milk At the Zoo

AP Features

NEW ORLEANS—A twenty-to-one increase in patronage in about two years is big business upswing but when the result is huge doses of milk of magnesia for public entertainers, it's none too pleasant.

The sharp gain in visitors to the Audubon park zoo here since Pearl Harbor greatly pleases Park Superintendent George Douglass. But for the 400 animals—well, it has meant a steady series of belly-aches.

"Everybody has to toss at least one peanut to a monkey before they call it a day. Thus, many of the animals are pretty sick creatures, and have to take milk of magnesia," Douglass says, adding it's no cinch getting milk of magnesia down a tiger's throat—the tiger doesn't like it, and the attendant doesn't either.

PIN-WORMS

Now can be Beaten!

The miseries of Pin-Worms have been known for centuries, and many doctors have sought a way to deal with this dreadful pest that lives and grows inside the human body.

Today, thanks to an important scientific discovery, a new and highly effective treatment is being hailed by medical authorities. It is based on a remarkable drug known as gentian violet. This drug is the vital element in P-W, the new Pin-Worm tablet developed by the laboratories of Dr. D. Jayne & Son, America's leading specialists in worm medicines.

P-W makes it unnecessary for you or your child to suffer in silence with the embarrassing rectal itch caused by Pin-Worms, or to take chances on the real distress they often create. The small, easy-to-take P-W tablets act in a special way to destroy Pin-Worms.

So watch for possible warning signs such as: itching seat and nose, uneasy stomach, bed-wetting, nervous fidgeting. If you suspect Pin-Worms, ask your druggist for a package of P-W and follow the simple directions carefully.

It is easy to remember: P-W for Pin-Worms!

that several big Allied invasion fleets are ready to sail from various points in the British Isles. Some of them may be intended to feed the Cherbourg operation. Or they may be set for new amphibious assaults. That's the big worry of the Hitlerites right now.

These early days of the invasion are the ones on which Hitler is gambling to produce a fluke which may give him a negotiated peace instead of unconditional surrender. He knows that, barring some freak of fortune, he already is beaten. This is his last long-shot gamble.

meager at Supreme headquarters. It appeared the Allies had reached an interim stage where tired troops were pushing forward more slowly in order to get their second wind and let supplies catch up with them. Unloading conditions were none too good.

The Germans continued to broadcast reports of new Allied landings at various points on the Cherbourg peninsula, but the Allied command mentioned no such operations. The Germans declared they had identified the American first, fourth and 29th infantry divisions and the 101st airborne division in action in that area. Supreme headquarters announced the American first was in the forefront at the original landing.

In yesterday's air operations Allied fleets destroyed 72 German planes for a loss of 40. Germans made four fighter-bomber attacks against the invasion beaches between early morning and late last night, employing some 60 planes, but each time they were driven off. They made an unconfirmed assertion that Nazi planes set fire to an Allied cruiser yesterday off the invasion beaches.

A German broadcast declared "it seems that a bitter tank battle" north of Caen "has not yet reached its peak."

sion beaches between early yesterday morning and late last night, employing some 60 planes, but were driven off each time.

The first three attacks were handled by RAF Spitfires, which shot down three German planes and damaged more without loss. The last attack cost the Germans seven planes, again with no loss to the Allies.

Several hundred RAF heavy bombers, flying through rain and thick clouds, hit the switching yards and rail junctions at Rennes, Fougères, Alençon, Mayenne and Pontaubault last night. These lie south and west of the Normandy fighting front. Two of the heavy bombers are missing from these operations.

From H-hour Tuesday until noon yesterday 289 Allied planes had been shot down—barely one per cent of the number of sorties flown. In the same period 176 German planes were destroyed.

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO
Argus blinked. Butch was lying on the floor only a foot away. He sat up and tried to focus his eyes on his boss.

"What happened to you?" Argus asked.
"I hid him yelp, just before the shot, and I tackled him. Den somepin hit me. Felt like de time I was in the ring wid Slugger McGray."

The brass ashtray was lying on the floor a few inches away from Butch who had a nasty gash in his forehead.
"Argus! He shot you!" Ellen exclaimed coming up to him. The detective put his hand to his shoulder. Blood was beginning to show through his coat. "Well I'll be..." he observed. "I didn't even know it. Did you tell the guys downstairs to be on the lookout for—"

"Yes," Ellen said. "Oh your poor shoulder! I'm going to call a doctor."

"There's one in the building," Argus said. "Tell the elevator boy to send him up." Ellen hurried out. Argus tried to help Butch up from the floor. Suddenly he felt dizzy. He swayed and put out his hand to steady himself.

"Did I do right by toining out de lights?" Butch asked. "I seen 'em do it in de movies."

"Sure, you did fine, Butch," Argus said with a sigh. His shoulder was beginning to pain. "But it was a little backwards! In the movies the gangsters douse the lights when the detectives break into their hideout. We just put the reverse English on it." The detective sank on the couch.

"The doctor'll be right up," said Ellen. "Oh, Argus," she cried, gingerly touching his shoulder. The house phone buzzed. She answered it.

"He dashed out before we could stop him, Miss, and so we've called the police."

"Good," said Ellen. "But hurry that doctor up here!"

Ellen went into the bedroom and came back with a wet towel. Argus was lying very still, his eyes closed. "Argus! Argus!" she screamed; then sobbed. The doorbell rang. Ellen ran to answer it.

A nondescript little man stood there. He had a bald head and wore horn-rimmed glasses. He held a black suitcase in one hand.

"I'm the doctor," he announced solemnly. "Where's the patient?" Ellen led the way. The doctor walked over to the sofa and took Argus' pulse. "He's just fainted," he said.

The doctor looked from Argus to Ellen, and then at Butch who was standing by with a bewildered expression on his face.
"That's quite a cut you've got. What's been going on up here?" Little family row?

"A boigler broke in," said Butch. "If I could'a laid my hands on dat mug, I'd'a torn him limb from limb."

The doctor finished bandaging the detective wound. Ellen watched him silently, her hands clenched. Butch nervously paced the floor. Argus opened one eye, tentatively. "How do you feel?" the doctor asked.

Argus blinked and tried to sit up. The doctor pushed him back gently. "What hit me?" the detective asked. "You fainted. Shock mainly."

You'll be all right. It's just a flesh wound, but you've got to rest." The doctor held up the bullet he'd removed from the detective's shoulder. I'll have to make out a report on this. Your friend here," he glanced at Butch, "says a burglar shot you."

"That's right," answered Argus. "It is not," Ellen piped up. "Bill Carstairs shot him."

"Now, Ellen," said Argus. "did you get a good look at the man's face?"

"No. But I can put two and two together, and Dorry said—"

"Nevertheless, we're only guessing. Doctor, I wish you'd look at his head."

"Aw, I'm all right," said Butch. "It's just a scratch. It's lucky it was only my head."

"Let me see," said the doctor. Butch bowed his head. "He's all right. I'll put a patch on it."

The doorbell rang again. Ellen went to answer it. When she returned a big policeman was at her heels. "Who shot who?" he asked.

"You're just in time, Officer," Argus said. The doctor was putting his instruments into his bag and saying, "I'll have to make out a report. I explained to Mr. Steele that in the case of a bullet wound—but since you're here, I can give it to you." He took out a pad and pencil and made some notations.

"Now," said Patrolman O'Grady, "what's all this about?"

"Bill Carstairs shot him," Ellen declared.

"Ellen, please—" demurred Argus.

"I honestly don't know that it was Carstairs," asserted Argus. "I did receive a warning from his wife that her husband was looking for me with a gun, but the man who broke in here didn't look like Car-

"Go on," O'Grady said. "I'm waiting."

"I found a cancelled check in his pocket made out for five thousand dollars and—" Ellen began.

"Whose pocket?" barked Officer O'Grady.

"Let's all have a drink," invited Argus.

"Not while on duty," declined the good O'Grady.

The doctor smiled sourly and finished his report. He handed it to O'Grady.

"I guess that's all," he concluded. "If you want to reach me, my office is downstairs. I'll drop in tomorrow. Good night and don't forget to rest." Butch showed him out.

"Now," said O'Grady, "let's have it. This Carstairs shot you because he was trying to recover a check that—"

"I honestly don't know that it was Carstairs," asserted Argus. "I did receive a warning from his wife that her husband was looking for me with a gun, but the man who broke in here didn't look like Carstairs to me. It was pretty hard to tell, because his hat was pulled over his eyes and Butch doused the lights before I could get a good squint at him."

"Anything missing from the apartment?" O'Grady asked.

"I haven't investigated yet," Argus replied.

"You've been working on this Verne murder, Mr. Steele? Now, was this Carstairs mixed up with—"

"It's a long story, Officer. And I'm not prepared to make a statement just now. Inspector Grange can give you all the dope."

O'Grady granted. "Mind if I have a look around?"

"Go ahead."

"I can't see how he got in," Ellen said. "The doors and windows were all locked."

"Other people beside you know how to pick a lock, my sweet."

O'Grady returned from the bedroom a minute or so later. "He went through your bureau drawers all right," he said, "and he picked the lock on your front door."

"Yes," agreed Argus. "I thought that might be it. That's why I don't believe it was young Carstairs. I don't think he'd know how to pick a lock."

"If it wasn't Carstairs who could it be?" Ellen asked. "Is there something else here that some one wants?"

"The letter I said Cynthia Lane wrote me," answered Argus.

"I think I'll call headquarters and have this Carstairs taken into custody," said O'Grady, marching purposefully toward the phone. "Is he the son of the William Carstairs that makes all that catsup?"

"Yes," nodded Argus. In the excitement he had forgotten about his invention. The policeman picked up the receiver. He no sooner lifted it from the cradle when there was a sharp detonation.

O'Grady jumped, dropped the phone like a hot potato and reached for his gun. "What in blue blazes!" he exclaimed.

"It worked!" Argus cried. "It worked, Ellen!" He began to laugh. He couldn't stop.

"What is this, a game? Where did that shot come from?" O'Grady barked, looking around. Then he saw the air-conditioner. Argus had left the lid open. O'Grady stared at the mounted gun and piece of twine that connected the trigger with the revolving blower.

"Don't be frightened, Officer," said Argus, still laughing. "You can make your call now. It won't happen again. There was only one blank in there." Cautiously O'Grady picked up the phone and replaced the receiver. Instantly it began to ring. He glanced uncertainly at Argus. Then he answered the call.

"It's for you," he said.

"Perhaps I should take the message," offered Ellen. "You ought not to move around much, Argus. You know what the doctor said."

"It's all right," said Argus, getting up slowly. He took the receiver from O'Grady. "Hello! Steele speaking!"

"Steele, this is Grange. Flags just regained consciousness for a few minutes."

"Yes? How is he?"

"He'll be o. k. He hit his head when he fell. That's what knocked him out. He may have had a dizzy spell."

"What did he say?"

There was a slight pause at the other end of the wire. "He doesn't know who shot him," the Inspector said. "Or he won't tell. And Sturgis has disappeared. He walked out of that studio of his and—vanished."

"Disappeared? Say, Inspector, one of your men is here. I think he has something to tell you." He handed the phone to O'Grady.

"Who's disappeared?" Ellen asked as she helped Argus back to the couch. The policeman was trying to explain to Grange what had happened.

"Sturgis has disappeared," Argus repeated. Then he frowned. "And I wanted very much to question him. Now—now it may be too late!"

Softball Second Round Openers Go To Mullins And China

Dale Ritchie Pitches One Hit Game Against Sheens; Mullins Win In Walkaway

Winning their seventh straight victory and their first second round game in Class A softball, the Salem Chinas nosed out Sheens 3-0 at Centennial park yesterday as Mullins walked away with their opener 17-3 over Jim's Service.

The China-Sheens battle was a close one for most of the route, although Pitcher Dale Ritchie limited the losers to a single hit and no threats at scoring.

Francis Lannay was tagged for six hits by the powerful China aggression, but two costly errors allowed two of the three runs to get across.

The China started scoring right off by pushing a run over in the first after Lannay had walked Harry Ehrhart. Things went smoothly until the fourth, when another hit, a walk, coupled with a single and an error with the bases loaded pushed in two more.

Mullins didn't seriously threaten for the balance of the game and even hard hitting Jimmie Appedison, the league's second best hitter, couldn't come through with a single against Ritchie. Jay Leach lined a scorcher to left-center in the early innings for the only safety. Mullins piled up the biggest total of the season by smacking in 17 runs against the newly entered Jim's team. The latter tied Mullins' score in the second, but things got more difficult in the ensuing frames and seven errors, plus 12 solid hits added to the score every frame but the last.

Alec Simeon banged out a four bagger in the third to break the 1-1 tie. Mullins got four more in the fourth, one in the fifth, and 10 big ones in the costly sixth.

Second round games tonight bring the News and Paxsons together in the first fray and Demings against the Recreation in the second. None of the teams have played any second round contests as yet.

Walters Becoming Menace to Cards' Pennant Chances

Beats the National League Champs for Third Time This Season

By JACK HAND Associated Press Sports Writer

Leave it to Bucky Walters and the Cincinnati Reds will ruin the St. Louis Cardinals' dreams of a third straight National League pennant.

Leave it to the home run, and the New York Yankees will wind up in the American league's all-star column.

These are two strange developments produced in the major leagues by a third wartime season. Up to 1944 Walters had beaten St. Louis only 18 times in 42 starts, but now he has handed them three straight setbacks by scores of 1-0, 2-0 and 2-1. Not until the ninth frame of last night's 2-1 tilt in Cincinnati were the Cards able to break a strong 3-0 scoreless innings against Bucky's effective tossing. Walters thus became the first big league hurler to notch a ninth victory.

Top Pitchers Meet Two top-ranking National league hurlers clashed as Walters tangled with Max Lanier, and Billy Southworth followed with a second ace, George Munger, in relief but the Cincy No. 1 man took the nod on two unearned runs.

Since 1935 the Yankees have been home run kings of the Harbidge loop, but the blow that built the big stadium in the Bronx has been backfiring against the world champs. In 42 games only 20 Yanks have homered, against 27 by the opposition, the latest being Roy Partee's first round tripper of the season in the last of the ninth yesterday to give Boston an 8-7 twilight edge.

Washington Wins Washington pulled out of the cellar on George Myatt's triple scoring Johnny Sullivan and Milo Canfield in the 11th for a 7-5 margin over Philadelphia after the A's had tied with three in the ninth.

Connie Mack's men tumbled all the way into the basement when Cleveland bunched three hits in the fifth to down the St. Louis Browns, 4-3, in a night game. Doubles by Mike Rocco and Roy Cullenbine, who is setting the American league on fire with his slugging feats, provided the winning margin over Jack Kramer who allowed but six hits. The Detroit-Chicago game was postponed because of rain.

Shortstop Eddie Stanky, recently acquired from the Cubs, bowed in as Brooklyn shortstop to steady the Dodger infield in a double triumph over the Phils, 6-3 and 8-1. Bill Vosselle grabbed his sixth victory in 13 starts as the New York Giants shaded Boston, 6-4, and Chicago rioted with eight runs in the second but had to keep pressing to trim Pittsburgh, 10-6.

SPORT CHATTER

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

NEW YORK, June 9.—The National Baseball Congress, Ray Dumont's big semi-pro outfit, is ready to tackle a job the minor leagues considered too expensive—distributing free instructions to kids on how to play baseball. Dumont already gives out rule books through 125 radio stations and reports three-fourths of the requests come from kids. Next year the books will include something on how to make those plays the rules say are okay. "The price of baseball books which are now on the market is too steep for the average kid," Ray explains.

FILLING POP'S SHOES When Eric C. Wilson, Jr., of Iowa City won the State high school quarter mile championship recently, he wore the same pair of light weight track shoes he had used 20 years ago in bettering the world 200 and 400-meter records in the Olympic trials. Young Wilson, in his first year of competition, scored 115 points in nine meets and was unbeaten in the 440-yard dash. Who said baby needs a new pair of shoes?

SHORTS AND SHELLS Mexico will send a half dozen tennis stars, including a couple of promising youngsters as well as national champions, to the United States late in July to prepare for a shot at the Forest Hills center court. The Cubs' Phil Wrigley is looking into the possibilities of starting a mid-western soccer league to operate in baseball parks during the off season. Leo Houck, Penn State boxing coach, has added a captured Nazi flag to his collection of war trophies. It was sent by Lieut. Howard Anderson, former Lion boxing manager. Mrs. Red Rolfe keeps score at all Yale baseball games and provides statistical aid for Red during the basketball season by checking on plays that don't show in the box scores.

HEADLINE HEADLINER Local headline "Giants, Dodgers and Yanks will rotate at Polo grounds." What makes the War bond performance a novelty is that each club ordinarily confines such dizzy doing to its own park.

Parks Win 8-5 Over Endeavors In Junior Leagues Only Battle

Second Game Goes to Orphans as Sinclairs Fail To Appear

Parks A. C. topped the Christian Endeavors, 8-5, yesterday in Class B's only game as the Sinclairs forfeited to the Orphans in the other scheduled game.

Hurler Bowman held the Endeavors to a pair of lone singles while Bob Payer, pitching for the churchmen, permitted 10 hits. Dick Hahn picked up two hits in two trips to lead the Parks to their win.

The Parks scored in every inning but the first and last while a rally by the Endeavors in the sixth and seventh fell a little short. They scored four in the sixth and another in the seventh.

Former Dancing Master Now Boxing!

Pittsburgh's Billy Miller Back In Fight Game After Three Years

BY JAMES JORDAN

PITTSBURGH — Billy Miller, Pittsburgh's "Cinderella Boy" of boxing, is knocking on the light-weight title gates these days after winning 26 straight fights in little more than eight months of a so-called "comeback."

The elusive little Irish dancing master gave up boxing as a bad job almost three years ago. Bad luck had dogged him consistently through an in-and-out career that, apparently, got him exactly nowhere in the ring.

Quit the Ring He'd win a few. Then something would happen and he'd falter. Eventually, managers and promoters turned thumbs down. When he did fight, it was for peanuts. So he quit the ring.

But the lure of the ropes and resin was ever-present, and Billy continued to haunt the gymnasiums. He kept in shape with occasional workouts, by running, and by wrestling the freight he hauled — and still hauls — on his big semi-trailer truck.

"I wanted to fight, and still thought I could make something of it if I had any luck at all," the retiring, soft-voiced battler said. "But I couldn't get a good fight, and I didn't want to fight for nothing."

One day he approached Harry Pittler, manager of Ossie (Bulldog) Harris and other fighters — and that was when his meteoric rise really began.

"I didn't have too much hope for him," Pittler says. "On his record he didn't look like the 'name' fighter he has become. But he was so polite and so sincere I couldn't turn him down."

While Pittler's guiding hand undoubtedly had much to do with Miller's rise from obscurity, the general manager gives most of the credit to Terry McManus, his trainer, who helped Billy with his footwork until he earned the "dancing master" title.

His first important victory under Pittler's management came over Benny Goldberg several months ago — only the second defeat in Goldberg's quite impressive record. It was then Billy knew he was "in."

Miller isn't a terrific puncher, but wins his fights through his masterful footwork, a flicking left hand and a fast right. Through his long victory string, he scored but five knockouts. He's not sensational but, as Pittler says: "We win, don't we?"

Perfect Gentleman The perfect gentleman outside the ring, inordinately polite and actually bashful among strangers, Miller is the street expect of a top-flight boxer. There is no braggadocio, no bragado about him. Instead, it always is "yes, sir," and "no, sir," and when he signs an autograph it is "thank you."

Despite his rapid climb almost to the top of the lightweight heap, Miller has continued to drive his big truck daily.

Case Of Missing Ring
COHOES, N. Y. — Last November, City Clerk Eugene Hebert lost a valuable ring. Now, the missing item was turned up in North Africa, some 4,000 miles away. A letter from Army Sgt. Raymond Roulier, son of Cohoes' Mayor Rudolph I. Roulier, tells of finding the gold ring, bearing the initial "H," in his Christmas box. Hebert explained that the ring must have slipped from his finger as he placed the packages in young Roulier's Christmas box.
